To Members of Congress,

The United States has made tremendous progress in cleaning up our watersheds and protecting our wetlands. But in some places, the clock is being turned back.

We are witnessing a rate of wetland loss unprecedented in recent history. And more than half of the nation’s streams and rivers remain impaired.

Dirtier, polluted water. More flooding. Fewer fish and game.

Fewer quality days afield for American hunters and anglers and real economic impacts felt in communities large and small nationwide.

These are the impacts of wetland loss and watershed damage.

Sportsmen and -women urge your support for action to secure clean water for America’s outdoor legacy, and the rural economies that depend on hunting and fishing.
